CITY SEEKS BIDS ON GARBAGE PLANT

Sealed Proposals to be Received for Reduction Place Until March 21.

The matter of disposing of Janesville's garbage was taken up at a meeting of the city board of health Tuesday afternoon and as a result bids will be received for this work. Last July the Detroit Reduction works, which handles the Detroit garbage became interested in this city and made an offer, agreeing to dispose of the garbage for $125,000. Their plan was to run this plant themselves for several years and then to turn it over to the city.

If the plant worked well, arrangements could be made to dispose of the sewerage of the city also.

A representative of this plant now in Janesville reported to the board that the company will be unable to build the plant immediately as they have not yet completed the equipment. For this reason, the board voted to advertise for bids. The price, method and place of disposal should accompany the bid. They will be received until March 21.

It is expected that the Detroit company will be able to put in the plant before the summer is over.

Discusses Summation.
 The new state law concerning fumigation was also discussed. The new law says that persons in the houses where there has been a contagious disease must be washed and not smoked. No action was taken on the matter.

Farmers Asked to Aid in Buy Now Campaign

Farmers and those interested in agriculture are now assured that the present outlook is not hopeless in the readjustment conditions.

The farmer has been hard hit no mistake about that, but so has every other man and industry in the country. No one has escaped. The farmer has been the first to realize the decline because he paid high labor and production costs last summer to produce his tobacco, corn and livestock the price of which has slumped woefully.

It is granted that the farmer should not buy more than he needs but he should come to the market of the world and buy what he does need and must have to keep a modern farm. Nothing can be accomplished that will benefit the farmers by withholding products from the market and refusing to buy things actually needed on the farm or for the family. The farmer cannot expect high prices when he withholds his product from the market. The absence of the farmer from the market is hurting both the farmer himself and general business.

A new crop is being planted and harvested. Holding the 1920 crop will not help matters. Holding too long will mean a surplus along with the 1921 harvest. An over-supply means low prices for there never has been a monopoly trust or organization which could beat the law of supply and demand.

All the nation's great manufacturing plants are either idle or running on a reduced production schedule. The lack of employment is hurting the state and the nation. And the general unemployment condition is hurting the farmer. The farmers are not helping these conditions by refusing to buy. Either the rural city man who refuses to buy is closing more factories and creating more idle men. A man out of work and without money is a poor customer for farm products.

VETERAN PEDESTRIAN BURIED AT EDGERTON
 Milton Junction—Funeral services for Robert Carr, 30, veteran pedestrian of this village, who died here Saturday morning of heart failure, were held at 12:30 p. m. Interment was in Edgerton, Mr. Carr's former home.

Mr. Carr was known throughout Rock county for his hobby of bicycling from Milton Junction to Janesville, a distance of eight miles, every year on his birthday, November 4. He was born in Central New York, but spent the last of his years in the Wisconsin. This village had been his home for 20 years.

During recent years Mr. Carr had lived alone, working only when he cared to, as he had enough money to keep him in comfort. No near relatives survive.

 —then and now

THE meat peddler of the old days, who killed his own live stock and then sold the meat from the tail of a cart, is gone from our larger towns and cities. He was a pioneer and did good service but he couldn't keep up with his job. Crude methods had to give way to new ideas in sanitation and distribution.

Concentration of population drove the peddler and his wagon out and brought the modern packing industry and the neighborhood retailer in its place.

And the modern packing business means this:
 That neat farms and ranches, the centers of live-stock production, are packing plants that assemble and manufacture the meat products you use.

Swift & Company's plants and branches are co-ordinated, interchanging supply and supporting each other, when necessary, so that no section of the country may ever lack its daily meat.

ALIEN SAYS MAYOR MAKES ALL LAWS

Several of 31 Prospective Citizens Mixed Up—Wilson Called "Foreman" of U. S.

Mayor Thomas E. Walsh, Janesville, makes the laws for the state of Wisconsin and Woodrow Wilson is "foreman" of the United States.

Several candidates were badly mixed up in their answers regarding citizenship during the hearing held before Judge George Grimm in the circuit court Wednesday. There were 31 aliens who applied for citizenship papers and several were instructed to become more posted for the hearing to be held here in June.

Thomas Josephine Mills, 1124 Emerson street, who has taught school in Milwaukee for a number of years, obtained citizenship papers Wednesday. She was made an alien and did not know she was an alien until recently. Her father, coming from Ireland, neglected to take out citizenship papers.

Many of the candidates who were present at the hearing were much different appearance than the classes held previously to the hearing. They showed considerable advancement in American habits and speech and dress. Many of the aliens produced certificates of naturalization schools. The night school students of the night school were also present to answer the questions of the court and the government agent without hesitation. They understood what they were being asked and had accurate information in their answers.

Silk shirts, tanke slings and pompadour haircuts are some of the ways the new citizens take to demonstrate their Americanism.

In answering the examination questions many of the candidates confused the new administrations in the state and national government. One of the candidates, who said he was a native-born American, said that he was a native-born American.

A good many did not have a clear conception of the duties of the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government. One of the candidates, who said he was a native-born American, said that he was a native-born American.

Among those accepted were William Bell, Janesville; William Albert Smith, Williams; August Davis, Jefferson; Frederick Matthew Walker, Herbert John Whitting, Goornal Lombardo, Herman H. Teubert, Al Hanson, Paolo Spino, Giovanni, Joseph, Louis, Lombardi, Filippo, Louis William Ascani, Bolit.

Many of the candidates had served in the army and their witnesses were in many cases the same who had obtained their citizenship while in the service. All candidates were asked by either the court or naturalization officer of their status and they had supported the government during the crisis.

2 Singles Less Than Round Trip

Through a peculiar ruling of the Interstate commerce commission, interurban commuters between Janesville and Beloit may save several cents on a round trip by buying one-way tickets. Under the ruling a tax of 7 cents is now charged for round trips, making the fare 91 cents. This does not apply to the one-way fares which are 84 cents. The tax is not levied on fares as low as 42 cents, which is the fare for one-way passage charged by the interurban company.

In pre-war days the patrons of the interurban lines were encouraged to buy round trip tickets, being given a reduction of 10 to 15 cents. Tickets to Illinois at increased prices. ## COUNTY BREEDERS URGE SANE PRICES

Score Attempts of Speculators to Boost Charges to Dizzy Heights.

Same business methods in the selling and dealing of pure bred stock are being urged and advocated by the breeders' associations at live-stock authorities of Rock county. The price fixing of registered animals is condemned as hurting the whole pure bred business.

Speculators at one time got into the pure bred game to boost prices by spectacular methods far beyond the ability and means of the average farmer to pay.

Only a minority of farmers in southern Wisconsin now own pure bred cattle or hogs. The majority own grades. There is an enormous market for pure bred cattle, swine and sheep. A mean fat pig, a blooded boar is declared worth $50,000 and a registered bull $100,000 has hurt the business, say many breeders.

High prices of pure bred should be based on a price which would assure a profit to the buyer, said one breeder. "In the case of swine, you have to get the money back on the sale of a few pigs. You have to sell a whole lot of meat to make up for $35,000. It would take a good many pairs of milk to make up for a herd bull. Prices for $50,000 for a herd bull. Prices for $50,000 for a herd bull. Prices for $50,000 for a herd bull.

A SWEETHEART AT THIRTY

The Story of a Woman's Transformation
BY MARION RUBINCAM

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"Violet, dear," I began, "I am not saying I think Bud guilty of stealing money or even of being in league with those men who are planning the robbery."

Her expression softened at once. "Of course not. Bud couldn't do anything wrong."

I smiled a little bit at this. "He could. He's already done a lot of things that are wrong. But fortunately, none of them are so important."

"I don't care," I declared. "I love him just as much no matter what he did."

That was, essentially, the girl's whole character—when she loved it was a blind, all-absorbing devotion, but something very admirable about it. Women who are capable of such a love often must deliberately deceive themselves in order to keep up the illusion, but they are usually very happy in their love. She wandered back into the living room, and sat staring moodily out the window. With dark, curly hair, she came quiet as could be—except in warm weather when all the neighbors turned out upon their steps. Tonight there was nothing to see, but shabby house fronts and a few street lamps. I watched the girl with anxiety as I went back and forth settling the table.

"I wish Bud would come around this evening," she said presently, when I told her dinner was ready. But Bud refused to come, even when Violet went downstairs and telephoned the place where he lived.

"Pete's there," he answered the phone when I asked for Bud. "Violet said, coming upstairs again. 'I wonder what he's doing there?'"

It seemed to me that the worst thing possible under the circumstances was Pete's presence. Certainly the two boys were under suspicion. Pete more than Bud. And after all, where did Pete get these extraordinary tips about the market? He was nothing more than a messenger boy in one of the firms.

The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR JOE:

Do you happen to know if the sleeping sickness is the national disease of Finland? If so I'm sure that's what the matter with Hilma my Finnish maid, because besides sleeping her full natural eight hours at night she also drops into a heavy slumber during the daytime when she happens to be in a sleeping position, which with Hilma means almost any position except the absolutely upright perpendicular. The reason I thought she might be slightly afflicted with the sleeping sickness is because she does it so natural.

The worst part of it is Joe—that the easier she seems to fall asleep the harder it seems to wake her up. Of course to give the girl credit it may be because she only speaks Finnish and I try to wake her up in English, whereas if I knew just enough Finnish to try to wake her up in her own language it might be just what she needed. I thought of taking up a little Finnish just to use around the house that way, but the main difficulty is, the entire language sounds like one continual snore, making it almost impossible to decide just where to take it up.

However if I knew just a few household words in Finnish it would make my relations with Hilma much more diplomatic, because as it is whenever I try to tell her to do something I have to work so hard translating myself into the sign language that I might as well use the energy to do the thing myself in the first place. And even finally when she does understand she understands wrong.

I tried to skate backwards today Joe and although I didn't succeed, at least it made the way I skate forwards look 100 per cent better by comparison.

Fondly,

TESSIE.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I think I am always doing something to spoil them. I grew up with a large family of boys and with no one to pay any attention to my manners and general bringing up.

I like Topsy. "Just growed," and now I have to suffer for it myself. It seems as though I never in my life did anything in the right place. I have just about given up as a hopeless case.

No one had time to take an interest in me or my affairs and whenever the skies seemed to have fallen for me I had to hide it all in my heart, for confiding would bring nothing but "Well, why didn't you do it?" In trying to hide the hurt I was called "snuck up," which did not help matters any.

Of course, in such a large family I had much to do and was generally too tired for fun, so that now in a crowd I am entirely out of place. I am always a kill-joy, although I try not to be. I think I must be awfully stupid. I have had the chance to have such splendid friendships and I have always done something to spoil them. What is the matter with me and what can I do?

JUMBLED.

You can be observing and thoughtful. Pick out people whom you admire and watch how they act and talk. You need not be a parrot by any means, but you can subdue crudeness on your part through observation. To be thoughtful you must watch for opportunities to do kindnesses and in your conversations you must think before you speak. If you think how the thing you are going to say would affect you if some one said it to you, you can judge pretty well how the person you are talking to will take your remark.

The fact that you are alarmed about your social blunders shows that you are waiting up to certain crudenesses about yourself. That is encouraging and one by one you will overcome your imperfections.

Try not to worry about mistakes you have made. Instead, put your mind on your thought to the kind and helpful things you can do in the future.

GOOD APPLE DISHES

Apple Omelet—Make a plain omelet and when ready to fold over pour over it one cup of thick apple sauce. Fold over carefully and serve.

Old Virginia Fried Apples—Five thin slices of bacon, one cup light colored molasses, six large apples. Fry bacon till crisp and place on a hot platter. To the fat left in the frying pan add apples that have been cored and cut in thin slices. Fry about 20 minutes or until soft and golden in color, stirring constantly. Add the molasses and cook 20 minutes longer. Garnish the bacon with the fried apples.

Apple Pudding With Sweet Potatoes—Five small sweet potatoes, one-half cup water, four tablespoons shortening, one-half cup of maple syrup, five small apples, one-half teaspoon salt.

Wash the potatoes and boil for 10 minutes with jackets on. Remove the skins and cut potatoes in small pieces. Pare and chop the apples and place with alternate layers of sweet potatoes in a well oiled baking dish, seasoning each layer with salt and shortening. Continue the layers until all the ingredients are used. Pour over the pudding water and maple syrup and place in oven, cooking slowly until the apples are soft. Sauté Apples and Onions—Five medium sized apples, four medium sized onions, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup water, two tablespoons shortening. Put the shortening in a frying pan and heat. Add the onions cut in small slices. Cook until golden brown, then add the apples that have been cored and cut in thin slices, and lastly the water and salt. Cook until apples are tender. Best results are obtained if this is done in a covered vessel, removing the cover five minutes before serving and allowing the apples and onions to turn a golden brown.

LENTEN SUGGESTIONS

Cheese Gingerbread—Use one cup molasses, four ounces cheese, one teaspoon soda, one-half cup water, two cups flour, two teaspoons ginger.

home."

"I haven't Bud been to see us?" I asked, when we were alone in our little living room.

"Oh, that part of it is all right. I told him to keep away. He was only obeying orders. He had a large lump on his head, and looked a bit battered up, even though he was not badly hurt. As I told you, I thought I could keep this thing quiet, so I told him to stay home until he at least looked normal."

"What has happened about it today?"

"Today some rather serious things developed. His voice became very gentle, and his eyes, when he looked at me, were soft and kind. I had to have to tell him this, but after all the papers will have it, and you had better hear it from me. Frankly, the police think George is in with a gang of thieves."

"Well, couldn't be."

"Well, some things look bad for him. His friendship with this Peter—I forget his other name—who has stolen and who is being watched carefully, though he doesn't know that. Another fact is George's extravagance."

"But last fall when we came back to town, he was saving money to pay debts. Why, he did not always get enough to eat—I know that—I thought of some of the times he dined with us obviously half starved. Yes, true enough. But I know he afforded himself suits by the highest priced tailor in the city, and he says he helped finance some of those motor parties last summer and during the winter."

"Pete gave him tips on the market."

"Wrong as often as they were right. Pete says now that George owes him $2,000."

"Do you believe him guilty?" I asked.

"I don't know. But I have to let the police go on and try to convict. I mean, I can't stop it now. It isn't the money, it's because Bud seems part of a vast and dangerous gang."

"End," he said suddenly, coming to me and putting his hands on my shoulders. "End, my dear—tell me, will you hate me if I have to go through with this unpleasant affair?"

"No, it's your duty to do so," I answered. But I scarcely knew what I was saying. For his hands tightened a little on my shoulders. "Then suddenly, his arms were around me."

Tomorrow—A Love Story

Clay did not in the least believe his own argument. If he had come from a city he would have dismissed the matter as none of his business. But he came from the clean South-west where every straight girl is under the protection of every decent man. If she was in danger because of her innocence it was up to him to look after her. There was no more competent man in Graham County than Clay Lindsay, but he recognized that this was a delicate affair in which he must move warily.

Why Be Afraid of Good Food?

Eat What You Like Best But Follow It With a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.
